The work of oiling the streets of Farmington was begun Monday, and when the supply of oil that is now on hand can again resume the enviable reputation she has heretofore gained of being a dustless town, the oiling has been delayed somewhat, owing to the excessive rainfall the past few weeks. The Times would suggest, as an improvement of the present method of a single oiling each year, that beginning next spring, soon as the dust begins to fly, that a light oiling be given, and then follow, along about this time of year, with a heavier oiling. We believe in this way more satisfactory results will be secured, with the use of but little, if any, more oil. This is our belief, based on considerable observation along this line. Let's try it out next year, along the lines herewith suggested, and see if the results are not more satisfactory.

MISSOURI REGISTRATION ESTIMATED AT 340,000

Jefferson City, Mo., June 6.—The registration figures for Missouri will approximate 340,000, according to estimates at the office of the adjutant general here today. Missouri's quota had been placed by the War Department at 326,001. Complete returns from the State will not be available for several days.

Washington, June 6.—The mighty roll of honor of American manhood had begun to reach Washington tonight from the States that had completed their count of the men of military age registered yesterday. At a late hour only a few complete reports had been received, but preliminary unofficial returns were sufficient to show that millions of men await the call to arms.

The official figures were too scant for an accurate estimate of the total of the men who have registered. The first reports showed that the Census Bureau estimates of eligibles had not been equalled, but officials pointed out that the numbers by which one or two cities alone had exceeded the estimates would erase the entire deficiency of the several smaller States, sending in the first official returns.

In some of these cities registration still was in progress today, the attorney-general having approved the action of Provost Marshal-General Crozier in authorizing an extension of time where cards were lacking or where the registration machinery proved otherwise inadequate to its task.
